The lone excep tion is an oil-well driller temporarily located here and plays the game strictly for the sport when he happens to be in town when a game is on. The game bet ween the two teams was a fine ex hibition of the national game. Devine has a strong team and no one doubts that in a series of games with the Hondo team it would annex a fair percentage of the big end of the scores.

McCartney Believes He Would Have Had To Give Up If It riadn't Been For Tanlac.

"At the time I started on Tanlac I was down to a hundred and fifteen pounds and so weak I was fixing to give up my job, but now I tip the scales at one hundred and thirty-eight, five pounds more than I ever weighed in my life," said Thurstom L. Mc-Cartney, 407 North Harvey St., Oklahoma City, a well-known fireman on the M. K. & T. ("Katy") Railroad. "I had held out just about as long as I could," he went on, "and it simply took all the grit and will power I had to manage to stay on the job. My stomach gave me no end of trouble and my kidneys were all out of order and I had pains all through my back. It was all I could do to keep my old engine steamed up for the run, and when I got back home my joints were all swollen up and I felt so achey and exhausted that I was simply in misery. My sleep was broken up and I ate so little I got down to where I hardly had the strength to get around, and it looked like I was going to give out en-

"Well, the only thing that kept me from giving up my job was this Tanlac, it's certainly a great medicine. It straightened me right out and put me to feeling like somebody. I gained twenty-three pounds in weight and felt like I had been made all over again. I have enjoyed good health ever since, and it takes a mighty rough-riding engine to cause the slightest pain now. There are many railroad men in just the fix I was in, and I am glad to give this statement and I hope they will see it and take my advice and try Tanlac."

training at Emerson, the boundary town and gateway to the prairies which for 1,000 miles stretched into the mysteries of the unknown.

Emerson was the gateway of the great invasion. The "farthest west" of rail communication, on the threshold of the prairie country, it seemed the strategical point for the great city which must arise with the settlement and development of the fertile kingdom of territory lying between the Lake of the Woods and the Rocky mountains, and between the fortyninth parallel and the unknown northern limit of agriculture.

Harris left his wife with a company of other women in the government immigration building while he ser out to find, if possible, lodgings where she might live until he was ready to take her to the homestend country. He exploration must first make a trip himself, and as this might require several weeks his present consideration was to place her in proper surroundings before he left. He inquired at many doors for lodgings for himself and wife, or for his wife alone. The response ranged from curt announcements that the inmates "ain't takin' boarders" to sympathetic assurances that if it were possible to find room for another it would be done, but the house was already crowded to suffocation. In two hours Harris, notwithstanding his stout frame and his young enthusiasm, dragged himself somewhat disconsolately back to the immigration building with the information that his search had been fruit-

At the door he met Tom Morrison and another, whom he recognized as the teller of Indian stories which had captivated the children of his car.

"And what luck have ye had?" asked Morrison, seizing the young man by the arm. "Little, I'll be thinkin', by the smile ye're forcin' up. But what am I thinkin' of? Mr. McCrae is from 'way out in the Wakopa county, and an old timer on the prairie."

"Aleck McCrae," said the big man. "We leave our 'misters' east of the Great Lakes. An' Ah'm not from Wakopa, unless you give that name to all the country from Pembina crossing to Turtle mountain. Ah'm doing business all through there, an' no more partial to one place than another." "What is your line of business, Mr.

McCrae?" asked Harris. "Aleck, I said, an Aleck it is." "All right," said the other, laughing. "What is your business, Aleck?" "My business is assisting settlers to get located on suitable land, an' ekeing out my own living by the process. Tom here tells me you're hunting a house for the wife. Ah know Emerson too well to suppose you have found one." "I haven't, for a fact," said Harris, reminded of the urgency of his mis-

"It's out of the question," said Mc-Crae. "Besides, it's not so necessary as you think. What with the bad time our train made, an' the good time the stock train made, an' the fact that they started ahead of us, they're in the yards now. That's a piece of luck, to start with." "But V can't put my wife in a stock car!" protested Harris. "There's worse places," McCrae answered, calmly worrying a considerable section from a plug of black chewing tobacco. "Worse places, Ah should say. Ah've seen times when a good warm stock car would have passed for heaven. But that ain't what Ah have in mind. We'll all turn in an get the Stock unloaded, hitch up the horses, pack a load, an' get away. Ah've been making a canvass, an' Ah find we have six or seven families who can be ready to pull out this afternoon. My team will go along, with a good tent an' some cooking outfit. Everyone has bedding, so we're all right for that. Now, if we all hustle we can be started by 4 o'clock, an' out ten or 12 miles before we pitch camp. How does it

"What do you say, Mr. Morrison?" "I think Aleck's plan is best. I've my wife and the two girls, and there's no roof for their heads here. It suits

In a few minutes all hands, both men and women, were busy at the cars. Many hands made the work women and children were to go with my back was strong and my kidneys the party; Morrison and one or two hired men would remain in Emerson, complete the unloading, and take charge of the effects until the teams should return from their long journey. McCrae, on account of his knowledge of the town and of the needs of the journey, was chosen to secure the sup-

Each settler's sleigh carried that which seemed most indispensable. First came the settler's family, which, large or small, was crowded into the deep box. McCrae made them pack hay in the bottom of the sleigh boxes, and over this were laid robes and blankets, on which the immigrants sat, as thickly as they could be placed. More robes and blankets were laid on top, and sacks stuffed very full of hay served the double purpose of cushioning their backs and conveying fodder for the animals.

Morrison came up to Harris' sleigh, and gave it an approving inspection.

"You will all be fine," he said, "and a great deal better than wearyin' about here. Besides, you're just as well to be away," he added, in a somewhat lower voice. "McCrae tells me if this sun keeps up the roads will be gone before we know it, and that means a delay of two or three weeks."

At this moment McCrae himself joined the group. "There's only two in your party, Harris," he said, "an' while Ah don't want to interrupt your honeymoon, there's another passenger to be taken care of. Dr. Blain is going with us, and Ah'm going to put him in your charge. He's a bit peculiar, but Ah don't think he'll give you any trouble. It's just a case of being too much of a good fellow. One thing Ah know-he's a doctor. Ah'm going up town for him now; you can shift your stuff a little an' make room.

The whole party were ready for the road and waiting before McCrae appeared again. When he came a companion staggered somewhat uncertainly by his side. "I'm aw'right, McCrae," he was say-

"I'm aw' right. Shay, whash thish? Shildren 'v Ishrul?"

"Come now, Doctor, straighten up. Ah want to introduce you." Half leading and half pulling, Mc-

Crae brought the doctor to Harris' sleigh. "This is Mr. Harris, who you will travel with-Jack Harris. An' Mrs. Harris." The doctor had glanced only casually at Harris, but at the mention of the woman's name he straightened up and

"Glad to meet you, madam," he said. "And it's only proper that the pleasure should be all mine." There was a little bitterness in his voice that did not escape her ear. "But indeed I am glad to meet you," she answered. "Mr. McCrae has been telling us something of your work among the settlers. We are very fortunate to have you with us." He shot a keen look into her face. She returned his gaze frankly, and he found sarcasm neither in her eyes nor Harris' thoughts were on his team, on the two cows trudging behind, and on the multiplicity of arrangements which his new life would present for decision and settlement. But his wife gazed silently out over the ocean of snow. The rays of the sun fell gratefully on her cheeks, pale and somewhat wan with her long journey. But the sun went down, and the western sky, cloudless and measureless, faded from gold to copper, and from copper to silver, and from silver to lead. It was her first sight of the prairie, and a strange mixture of emotions, of awe, and loneliness, and a certain indifference to personal consequences, welled up within her. Once or twice she thought of home—a home so far away that it might have been in another planet. But she would not let her mind dwell on it for long. She was going to be brave. The sleigh in front was obstructing the road, and the party closed up in solid formation.

"Camp No. 1," called Aleck McCrae, from the head sleigh. "Run these sleighs up in two rows," and he indicated where he wanted them placed. "It's hard on the horses an' cattle, after the warm cars, but they'll stand it tonight if they're well blanketed. Tomorrow night we'll be among the Mennonites, with a chance of getting stable room."

Under Aleck's direction the sleighs were run up in two rows, about 20 feet apart, facing the north. Two sleighs were then run across the opening at the north end, so that altogether they formed a three-sided court. Men with shovels quickly cleared the snow from the northerly portions of the court, and there the tent was pitched. The ground was covered with blankets, robes and bedding. Pots and pans were produced; women eager to be of service swarmed about the stove, and children, free at last of their muffling wraps, romped in high-laughtered glee among the robes or danced back and forward with the swinging shad-with bread and gravy, was served up in tin plates and passed about the tent. Everybody-married men and women, maidens and young men, girls, boys, and little children-was ravenously hungry, and for a few minutes little could be heard but the plying of the viands. But as the first edge of hunger became dulled the edge of wit sharpened, and laughter and banter rollicked back and forward through the tent. The doctor, now quite sober, took a census, and found the total population to be 28. These he classified as 12 married, eight eligible, seven children, and himself, for whom he found no classification.

When the meal was over and the dishes washed and packed, Aleck made another round of the camp before settling down for the night. Meantime mothers gathered their families about them as best they could; the little ones sleepily mumbled their prayers, and all hands, young and old, nestied down like a brood of tired chickens under the white wings of the protecting tent. Outside the ground-drift sifted gently about the sleighs, the cows sighed in contentment, and the wolves yapped to each other in the distance.

USES THE MATCH?

The Smoker Mainly-Also Responsible for Spending Hundreds of Millions Annually for Liccoice, Sugar, Coal, Cigar Boxes, Tin Foil, Etc.

By GARRET SMITH

"Got a match?" How many times a day is that question asked in these United States? How many more times is the question unnecessary because most pockets are kept well supplied with the useful little article? Anyhow, inasmuch as it is estimated that there are 30,000,000 tobacco users in the country, we would guess that the answer to that question would run into the hundreds of mil-

For if it weren't for the smokers in these days of electric lights how many matches would be used? A pretty small proportion of the number of these "sticks of blazes" produced in the country every year. Abolish tobacco and the match business would be shot to pieces

But the match business is only one of a dozen or more allied industries which derive large revenues directly or indirectly from the tobacco trade and would suffer heavily if national prohibition of tobacco were to go into effect as some of our reformers would have it. The annual sales of tobacco products, based on retail prices, is estimated at $1,937,000,000. Of the cost of producing and selling this quantity of cigars, cigarettes and other forms of the weed, some hundreds of million dollars are paid out for other things than the raw tobacco and labor of making it up.

$25,000,000 a Year for Boxes

For example, the tobacco trade consumes each year 45,000,000 pounds of licorice, 50,000,000 pounds of sugar, both used in flavoring tobacco, and 650,000 tons of coal. It is estimated that the value of wooden cigar boxes used is $25,000,000 a year, quite an item to the lumber business and to manufacturers of the boxes.

In making these boxes pounds of nails are employed. Other large items used in making and preparing tobacco for sale are tin and lead foil, paper for bags and cigarette wrappers, cloth for tobacco bags, labels, coupons, etc., involving the printing trade extensively.

Then building contractors and manufacturers of machinery are largely interested. Investments in plants and machinery employed in manufacturing tobacco are estimated at $102,000,-000. Replacement, up-keep and interest on the investment make no small

And let realty men note there are approximately 325,000 tobacco farms in the country, with a total estimated valuation of $160,000,000, Of further interest to real estate men is the fact that there are 700,000 retail establishments selling tobacco, involving a total rental and up-keep impossible to estimate, besides the large amount of office space occupied by administrative branches of the general business.

The insurance men, too, have their share of the pickings. The tobacco bus ness pays out annually $7,000,000 in premiums in the United States. And there are the railroads who reap revenue from 2,210,000 tons of tobacco products every year. As for the advertising business, here again it is impossible to form any estimate of the enormous annual

The prohibition of tobacco would also knock a good-sized hole in the receipts of the United States government. The internal revenue receipts from tobacco for the fiscal year 1920 amounted to $295,809,355.44. Customs duties provided an additional $25,000,000 in round figures, making the total revenue return to the government $320,000,000. Influence on Popular Sentiment It is this interlocking of the tobacco bus ness with so many other interests and the vast amount of financial loss that would be involved in the abolition of tobacco that is one of the most serious aspects of the proposal to prohibit the sale of tobacco, a proposal however, which has little support by public sentiment if the newspaper editors of the country are correct in their estimate of that sentiment. In a poll of the editors made recently by the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States, through the Press Service Company of New York City. 95 per cent of the 7,847 editors who replied expressed the opinion that the people of their communities were opposed to any law against tobacco. As these editors represent some 80,000,000 readers the results form a pretty general test of national opinion.

In their remarks accompanying their replies many of the editors expressed it as their opinion that the opposition of their communities to the abolition of tobacco was based to some extent at least on the damage such a change would do to the business interests of the community. This was particularly true in the tobacco growing states and centers where there were large tobacco

But when the extent of the business involved in the allied interests of the tobacco trade is considered, as above briefly outlined, it is clear that there is hardly a section of the country that would not be affected directly or indirectly by abolishing tobucco.

LOSING GROUND

Prohibition of Weed Would Mean Canvass of 7,847 Editors Show. 7.393 Communities Against Abolishing Weed.

ANTIS LOSE THREE STATES.

Utah, Under Mormon Influence, Only Commonwealth to Adopt Prohibition Measure During Year.

"Is tobacco going to have its scalp added to the belt of the prohibitionist beside that of the lamented but as yet not altogether late alcohol?" is the question asked by Garret Smith in an article in the current issue of Leslie's Magazine."

The writer reaches the conclusion that while there has been increased agitation and legislative activity on the subject of tobacco following the success of the drive for prohibition of liquor the efforts of reformers seeking to abolish tobacco have no general support. This opinion is based on the results of the questionnaires on the subject sent out to newspaper editors of the country by the Press Service Company of New York City. The questions asked were:

(1) Do you favor the enactment of laws prohibiting the personal use of tobacco by adults?

(2) In your judgment does the general sentiment of your community favor such legislation?

(3) Is the use of tobacco personally objectionable to you? No arguments accompanied the questions and from their form it was impossible for any editor to determine the attitude of the questioners.

Out of 12,518 editors questioned, 7,847 replied according to the summary given. These editors, it is estimated, represent a combined circulation of 21,879,046. Of the 7,847 editors replying, 7,393, or 95 per cent, represent public sentiment in their communities as opposed to anti-tobacco legislation. Only 260 editors, or 3 per cent of those replying believed there was any considerable sentiment favorable to tobacco prohibition. There were 174. or 2 per cent, in doubt, while 20 failed to record their judgment. Editors' Judgment Unbiased

"It is of special interest to note that 569 editors in answering the first question, personally favored such legislation, although only 260 of them reported that public opinion also favored the prohibition of tobacco-an indication of the conscientious effort made by the editors to distinguish public opinion from their own personal opinions," the article continues.

"The highest percentage of replies reporting public opinion favorable to prohibition of tobacco came from Utah, where 42 per cent of the editors thought the public were for such a which has since adopted an antieigarette law. The result was forecast by several of the editors who stated that the influence of the Mormon Church was against tobacco. The Mormon Church is also strong in Idaho, which is the other state where the use of tobacco was recently prohibited. but the governor has signed the bill just passed, in which the prohibitory legislation is repealed. In this state 89 per cent of the editors estimate sentiment in their communities as against tobacco prohibition, which, nevertheless, is 6 per cent below the average reported opposition.

"The legislature of Tennessee some weeks ago passed and the governor has signed a bill repealing the anticigarette law of that state. The questionnaire showed 93 per cent of its editors believed the public against anti-tobacco legislation. The legislature of Arkansas has also passed a bill repealing its anti-cigarette law. In this state 94 per cent of the editors reported against tobacco prohibition.

Arizona's Practical Joke

"A bill, introduced in the current session of the legislature of Arizona to prohibit smoking in public dining rooms and other public places, was first amended to prohibit the consumption in public of peanuts, chewing gum, tea and coffee and then defeated by the senate. The questionnaire returns from that state were 92 per cent 'no.'

"In Iowa where the 'no's' were 95 per cent a bill to repeal the anticigarette law has been passed and signed by the governor.

"A bill to repeal the anti-cigarette law in Kansas, with 89 per cent 'no's, is receiving the attention of its legislature. Last year a petition for a referendum in Oregon to prohibit the use of tobacco failed of sufficient signatures to bring the question to a vote, and 95 per cent of the editors declare their public against legislation. In Oklahoma an anti-cigarette bill has been reported unfavorably in the house. The editors of that state reported 94 per cent against its public support.

"Outside of Utah, where Mormon influence predominates," the article concludes, "the anti-tobacco movement appears, as in the case of Tennessee, Arkansas and Iowa, to be losing ground and is not to any considerable extent supported by the peo-

The friends of tobacco feel particularly elated over this showing, inasmuch as 1920-21 was a maximum year in legislative circles with 42 state leglatures in session and the tobacco subject received an unusual amount of consideration.

Harding to Grant Diplomas.

Washington, D. C., May 26,—Announcement was made Wednesday at the White House that President Harding had accepted an invitation to pre-sent diplomas to the graduating class at the Naval Academy on Thursday, June 2. The President will make the trip to Annapolis by motor. - Press Dispatch.

The above announcement holds more than a passing interest for the people of Hondo from the fact that a member of the 1921 graduating class is a native of Medina county, being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gilliam.

Ensign George Gilliam, as he will be known in the navy from Thursday. is well known to a majority of our people who offer congratulations to the young ensign and wish for him a long and notable career in his chosen career as a member of Uncle Sam's great naval establishment.

The people of the United States feel a pardonable pride in their navy. From the days of John Paul Jones to the present it has never failed them in an emergency, and while we trust the ensign who has just been commissioned will never have to fire a shot at an enemy, we feel certain that should an unfortunate emergency arise the high reputation the navy has always enjoyed for courage and efficiency will never suffer at the hands of Medina county's representative in our sea power. Our navy has always been composed of dead-game sports and was never known to avoid a "scrap," and it can be truthfully said that it has never come out second best.

Ensign Gilliam will shortly return home on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gilliam, where he will rest and recuperate for a short while before being assigned to duty.

This is the second of the Gilliam boys to graduate from the naval academy, Ches. T. Gilliam being a member of the 1916 graduating class, receiving his diploma from President Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Nethery, who have been here the past week the guests of Mrs. Nethery's mother, Mrs. Theresa Westfall, left Thursday morning for Prairie Lea where they will spend a few days with Mr. Nethery's relatives before returning home to Los Angeles, California. The Nethery's are traveling by auto and followed the old Spanish Trail from California to Texas, which Mr. Nethery reports in very fair condition with the exception of a couple of short stretches. The trip was described as a most enjoyable one, the journey being made very leisurely, about eleven days being spent in actual travel, but Mr. and Mrs. Nethery consuming some fifteen days en route, stopping some time at different points of interest. The entire expense of the two from Los Angeles to Hondo Mr. Nethery estimated at $46-decidedly less than the trip could be made by any other means. When the couple left here they had not fully determined on their route home but rather favored going the upper route through Oklahoma, Colorado, Nebraska, Utah and back into California.
